● An Ode to the Apple

poem by Dawn Medley, associate director of media relations and publications

Mary Baldwin is not shy about honoring special fruits;
Apple Day relives tradition and takes us back to our roots.
On that unconventional October day apples take center stage, allowing a rare time to reflect and relax in this day and age.

There are games and apple treats, as you might have heard,
but did you know students also pick at a nearby orchard?
The sweet treats are weighed and donated to those in need and students revel in camaraderie and doing a good deed.

The college's celebration is not without solid reason,
there is much to laud about apples in their high season.
Next time you bite in, keep the apple's merits in mind;
you'll be glad to know more about the fruit on which you dined.

An MBC student gleans apples at a nearby orchard during a recent Apple Day

Varieties include Red Delicious, Granny Smith, and Jonagold, but there are many more facts you might not have been told.
For example, China tops the list for apple production,
and their powerful antioxidants help the body function.

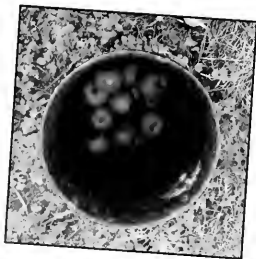

There's truth to the saying about "an apple a day;"
fiber and Vitamin C keep illnesses (and doctors) away.
And did you know the apple is a relative of the rose?
In Washington, New York, and Michigan many an apple tree grows.

Apples have long been a subject of legend and lore —
They're connected with beauty, wisdom, and health for sure.
The apple's association with paradise transcends culture and creed
From Hera's garden in Greek mythology to Eden's tempting seed.

Many know of William Tell, who split an apple with his spear
And the tale of Newton's Apple is another we hold dear.
One of America's fondest stories is of Johnny Appleseed
Who traveled frontier lands planting trees on which to feed.

The red, green, yellow fruits inspire many a turn of phrase,
With sayings like these, we could go on and on for days:
When someone catches your fancy, they're the "Apple of your eye,"
Or you might say something is "As American as apple pie."

Through the lines of this ode we hope your apple facts did expand to realize it is more than the name of a trendy computer brand.
So why does MBC celebrate such an ordinary fruit?
For its nutrition, inspiration, and popularity, the apple we salute.

The student-directed one-act play festival Lights Up! (May Term 2009)

The celebration kicked off with Bill I, "Cosmic Goofs," a sarcastic comedy directed by Michelle Brandt. "A girl attempts to put her life back together after her hippie boyfriend disappeared with her ex-best friend." It is followed by "Kung-Foolery," a comedy directed by Rin Barton, in which a young man, convinced that he is a ninja, engages his mother-in-law in deadly combat. In "That Afternoon," a drama directed by Alana Patrick, two college freshmen come face to face after an attempted suicide has torn apart their friendship. The evening finishes with "Bardo-First Time Around," a comedy with hints of heartbreak, directed by Miranda Uphoff. She describes it as "a dramatic comedy about the journey that a man must make to his second life."

Bill II debuted with "Here I Go, Boys. Wish Me Luck," a drama directed by Stori Ayers. A group of friends can't seem to find a way to cope with possibly losing another friend, and decide to take matters into their own hands. "Turtle Beach," a comedy directed by Lily Kerrigan introduces you to talking sea turtles. "Killeen," directed by Tanisha Tyler, is a suspenseful thriller about a repair woman who allegedly comes to fix an alarm system at a bar, but ends up accusing the owner of murder. The last production is "Before the Bell," a comedy directed by Ariel Howard. Imagine a class clown, a prom queen, a jock, a geek ... and one dead body.

"The brush is like a candle,
it has a light on one end."
